Board Averts Annexing Pressure

The Amarillo school board applied the pressure Tuesday night but Canyon school board members resisted efforts to enter into more than preliminary discussion on annexation by the Amarillo district of 11 sections of property now in the Canyon district.

The Canyon board, apparently backed by a large and strongly partisan crowd, declined to enter into "substantive" talks with the Amarillo board despite pressure to do so from Amarillo board members.

Board President Tom Keeling and Supt. Jerry Jacobs told the Amarillo board the Canyon members have not yet had a chance to really study the proposed annexation, but would do so possibly through a committee made up of Amarillo and Canyon board members.

W. W. "Bill" Carter, Amarillo board member, and Amarillo Supt. Robert Ashworth made lengthy presentations during the hours long session Tuesday in Amarillo.

Carter, who headed a committee of Amarillo board members studying the situation, said the committee's conclusions were:

*that existing momentum and direction of community development can reasonably be expected to continue unchecked.

*that such growth will continue to take the form of planned urban residential development similar to the type in progress east of Coulter Road.

*that the area to be served by the Amarillo district can remain largely coterminous with the city limits of Amarillo for the foreseeable future.

*that Randall County can gain faster, but both Randall and Potter counties will gain in population and evaluation.

*that these considerable benefits to Amarillo and North Randall County can be achieved with little if any loss to the Canyon district.

Carter said his committee believes that if the boundary lines do not change to add the 11 sections to the Amarillo district the effect will be that planned large scale development will be retarded and may not occur at all in its present form; that planned large scale development will be diverted from the area in question; and that Randall County could lose a considerable amount of potential evaluation and population increase.

"The committee recommends that the outlined area should be considered for annexation and if accomplished, the committee believes that such area can reasonably be presumed to be sufficient to satisfy the growth potential of Amarillo to the southeast and west for the next quarter century," Carter said.

He said the committee believes the advantages to the annexation far outweigh the disadvantages.

Ashworth suggested that in exchange for the annexation, the Canyon district could be paid for a reasonable period the tax losses and that the Amarillo district would be willing to assume a portion of the district's debt service.

He said he anticipates that if the 11 sections in question are developed the district which has the sections will be charged with the responsibility of providing elementary, junior high and high schools for the children.

"Assuming the city limits of Amarillo continue to expand as development occurs, how interested and eager would the

Murder Trial Goes To Jury

The fate of Marvin Lolmaugh, 30, of Amarillo who told jurors he killed his father-in-law last November because he believed the father-in-law was having sexual relations with his own daughter remained in the balance late Wednesday as a 181st District Court jury continued deliberations which began just after noon.

The jury of 10 men and two women were first to decide Lolmaugh's guilt or innocence and then were to return to the jury room to decide his punishment if their original verdict was guilty.

A day and a half of testimony preceded the charge of Judge Don Dean, read to the jurors at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday and the subsequent 1½ hours of argument by the prosecution and defense.

Lolmaugh was charged with murder in connection with the death of Pinky T. Mullin, 50, an Amarillo barkeep.

The jury retired to deliberate on its verdict about 1 p.m. Wednesday following arguments by Prosecutor Bob McClendon and Defense Attorney Harris Hampton.

The defense rested its case, which relied heavily on the testimony of Lolmaugh and his wife, Julia, 26, about 8 p.m. Tuesday following a day and a half of the trial.

The state had earlier rested about noon Tuesday.

The defense case in the three-day trial revolved around an implied defense contention that the killing was justifiable homicide.

The jury got the first hint of the incestuous father-daughter relationship, however, through the testimony of state's witness Mrs. Sharon Hart of Amarillo.

Mrs. Hart, former wife of the victim, Mullin, told jurors late Monday she had been married to Mullin about nine years.

Her testimony verged on the point of tears many times as Mrs. Hart told of a relationship between her husband and his daughter, Julia, which Mrs. Hart suspected to be incestuous but could never prove.

It was during cross examination of the witness by Hampton that Mrs. Hart testified that Julia Lolmaugh visited in the home of she and Mullin frequently. She recalled one such visit:

"We had went to Buffalo Lake and I had a horrible suntan and we had come in and I was tired. Julia was laying on one end of the couch and Pinky was on the other end and their feet were touching. I went to the bedroom. I could hear and I could see the way the partition was placed. The phone rang and Julia answered it and asked her father if she should wake me up. She hung up the phone.

"I then heard what I would say was deep breathing and sounds of sexual relations — this is what I had pictured in my mind. I tried to get to the light switch and because it was across the room I could not. I couldn't stand up and I slid off the bed and tried to tiptoe. I saw Julia in jean shorts zipping up the front."

Mrs. Hart testified that an argument ensued during which she accused Mullin of having sexual relations with his daughter. He denied the charge, she told jurors.

Mrs. Hart said she asked Mrs. Lolmaugh about having sexual relations with her father several times, but "she never admitted it."

She also told jurors of a court suit in Kansas involving Mullin and a former wife. She said part of the case involved in the suit was the allegation that Mullin was having sexual relations with his daughter.

Mrs. Hart testified that Mrs. Lolmaugh went to California for two years in the late 1960s with a man she had met and returned with a child.

It was with calm, emotionless voice that Mrs. Lolmaugh related a span of some 10 years during which time she had numerous sexual relations with her father.

Mrs. Lolmaugh faced the jury impassively as she answered defense questions.

She testified that she had gone to a movie on the night of Nov. 7, 1972 and then met Mullin at the Circus Room, where he was working as a part-time bar keeper.

She said they talked and then agreed to meet later in the evening at Betty's Cafe on Bell Avenue.

After driving around awhile, she testified, she went to Betty's Cafe and Mullin was already there.

"He said 'let's go for a ride,'" she testified, "and I said I didn't know if we should because his wife might be out."

WT Officials Will Meet With A&M On Laboratory

Officials at West Texas State University, now preparing a proposal for location of a diagnostic veterinary laboratory on the Canyon campus, are to meet with representatives of the Texas A&M board of regents in the near future.

Dr. Charles Smallwood, dean of the WTSU school of agriculture, told members of the Chamber of Commerce board Monday night the meeting will be to discuss how the A&M regents will decide where to locate a diagnostic lab okayed recently by the Texas legislature.

The meeting, which could come this week, will give WTSU officials the proper channels to work through to present a proposal that the lab be located here.

Smallwood traced the history of a bill originally introduced in the House by Rep. Bryan Poff calling for the lab to be constructed on the WTSU campus.

As passed, the bill provides that the lab will be located in either Potter or Randall counties will be financed by $950,000.

Smallwood said the regents could decide to appoint a committee to select the site or could select the site themselves. No matter how they choose to select the site, he said, WTSU will prepare a proposal that the site be in Canyon.

He said the proposal will present the site WTSU can offer for the lab and the site advantages.

"There are several things in our favor," he said. "One is our past discussion and the cooperation we had before. The second is that we have the most logical location. Third, there are very few if any strong locations in Potter or Randall counties. Fourth, the site has the support of the majority of the people who will be using it."

Smallwood said the WTSU site has the support of many Amarilloans.

"We know we have the support from some at A&M," he said. "We

County And City Show Surpluses

Randall County and the City of Canyon both ended their 1972 fiscal years with surpluses in the bank.

For Randall County, the surplus amounted to $408,000 while the City managed to end up their fiscal year with a surplus of almost $39,000.

County and city commissioners reviewed their fiscal year audit reports in separate meetings Monday.

"It seems like in all areas we underbudgeted," County Commissioner John Fulgenzi said while perusing the county audit.

The county audit reflects a large surplus, but that surplus is almost entirely in the county's road and bridge fund which wound up the year with $419,000.

A surplus of $13,000 was left in the jury fund, a surplus of $20,000 was left in the general fund, a surplus of $8000 was left in the courthouse and jail fund, a surplus of $37,000 was left in the salary fund and a surplus of $9000 was left in the permanent improvement fund.

Fulgenzi's comment was directed primarily at spending in 1972 out of the general fund, where many item costs exceeded their proposed budgetary limits.

Office supplies and printing, for example, cost $39,000 in 1972 compared to $26,000 budgeted for that item.

The county audit reveals that taxes assessed totaled $647,878 in 1972. That compares to $399,000 taxes assessed in 1962.

The audit also reveals that the county purchased equipment at a total cost of almost $60,000.

The county's audit was presented by Bill Francis of Doshier, Pickens and Francis of Amarillo.

Gene Glazener of Glover, Graham and Brown of Canyon presented the city audit Monday night.

The audit reveals a surplus of almost $39,000 with expenditures totalling $412,000 and revenues totalling $451,000.

Revenues for 1972-73 fiscal year for the city were almost $30,-

Initial Okay Given For New School

The Texas Education Agency has given tentative approval to initial drawings of a two-building complex for the Canyon High School vocational school.

Supt. Jerry Jacobs told board members Tuesday night the school architect went to Austin recently with his drawings to submit to the agency. Jacobs returned from an Austin meeting Tuesday and said the approval has been given.

The plans, as drawn by Cantrell and Associates of Amarillo, call for two buildings — a classroom building and a shop building — to be constructed adjacent the current vocational agriculture building on the high school campus.

A total of almost 25,000 square feet are contained in the two buildings, which will house all the vocational courses with the exception of vocational agriculture and woodworking.

A small building will house classrooms and office space, and a larger building will house several shop areas.

The TEA is funding agency for 55 per cent of the $500,000 pro-

Fuel Crisis Problems Said Few For Gas Co.

Although the nation-wide fuel crisis will have some impact on Pioneer Natural Gas Co., it will not have widespread effect in Pioneer's service area.

That's what K. Bert "Tex" Watson, company president, told newsmen, civic leaders and elected officials Tuesday in a Hereford speech.

Watson, who noted that Pioneer is a completely intrastate company, said federal regulations relative to interstate companies have stifled incentives to explore for new gas reserves and had the effect of spawning the energy crisis.

He said many companies cannot afford to look for new natural gas resources due to price controls on the gas industry by the government.

These controls must be relaxed, he said, if sufficient exploration is to be done.

The company president said Pioneer "continues to enjoy an enviable position with reference to its gas reserves."

Using slides to depict the two basic resource areas for Pioneer's gas supply — an area below Midland and an area in the northeastern portion of the Panhandle — Watson said the company and its subsidiaries are busy exploring for new gas supplies and are constantly working within the industry to find new gas resources.

Watson set the stage, however, for what may be the company's attitude on prices and supply to area cities.

He said based on 1972 gas consumption, Pioneer's reserves are sufficient for approximately 14 years.

"After deducting all current contractual commitments to all large industrial customers, the volume of reserves is sufficient to supply all other customers at the 1972 consumption level for a net reserve life index that exceeds 20 years," he said.

Watson said more gas could be taken from marginal wells if gas prices were high enough to support the effort.

Looking at the near-term expectations for the fuel crisis, Watson said he anticipates that shortages will continue in fuels.

He said coal usage has a good potential, but no new mines have been opened and several have closed. Oil importation in the next few years will not increase significantly, he said, because currently operating refineries are running at near-capacity levels now.

Gas exploration, while it is increasing, is too far behind to make a significant difference he said.

Students line up to obtain more enrollment information Monday at West Texas State University. More than 2700 persons registered to attend the first summer session at the university. The session began Tuesday.

Amarillo Aquatic Club Sponsors Swim Meet

Over 400 people are expected to participate in the third annual West Texas Open Swim Meet scheduled all-day Saturday and Sunday in the West Texas State University Activities Center Swimming Pool.

The event, which will bring swimmers from a tri-state area to Canyon, is sponsored and hosted by the Amarillo Aquatic Club, which will have a 75-member team participating in the events.

Among teams to attend the meet will be those from Oklahoma City, Albuquerque, El Paso, Midland, Lubbock, Odessa, Pampa and numerous other area towns.

Competition will be in freestyle, backstroke, breast stroke, individual medley and butterfly. Age divisions are for boy and girl swimmers 10 years and under, 11-12 years, 13-14 years and senior (12 years and over).

Individual high point awards will be given in each category to boys and girls, and three awards will be given to the three top teams based on total points.

First, second and third place medals will be given in each of the 72 events to boys and girls, and ribbons will be awarded for places 4-8.

Mrs. Don Dean, publicity chairman, announced that all awards are being contributed by the Hanson Post No. 54 of the American Legion. The ribbons, she says, will be made of top-grain cowhide leather.

According to Mrs. Dean, the meet will be the largest ever to be held in the WT Activities Center pool.

Assisting the Aquatic Club in presenting the event will be the Canyon Chamber of Commerce and Jaycees. She said that any persons 17 years or older wishing to assist in the meet should contact the Amarillo Aquatic Club.

The meet will begin at 9 a.m. each day and continue through the afternoon. The event is open to the public.

Five To Graduate

Graduation exercises for five students who have participated in the Canyon Independent School District's Vocational Adjustment program will be held at 7 p.m. Friday at the Yum Yum Tree Restaurant.

The three-year program, which is offered by the school district in cooperation with the Texas Rehabilitation Commission, is under the coordination of Mrs. Juaniza Cross.

This will be the second class graduated under the program, which combines class work with on-the-job training.

Graduating students are Larry Foster, son of Mrs. Loyce Jones; Latica Koch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Thompson; Robin Pennington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Kennedy; Donald Pace, whose houseparents at High Plains Children's Home are Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Messer, and Aubrey Prichard, son of Mrs. Janice Prichard.

All participating students were 18 years and over.

John D. Sommer, Canyon High School principal, will present diplomas, as well as deliver the invocation and benediction.

Speaking to the students and their families will be Jerry Jacobs, superintendent of the Canyon Independent School District. Mrs. Cross will present an award to the outstanding student in the program.

13 Register For Summer School

If low enrollment figures are a curse to West Texas State University, they are something of a tribute to the Canyon public schools in their summer remedial and makeup program.

The total enrollment count for summer school at Canyon Junior High School is 13, and that figure represents students in the seventh, eighth and ninth grades enrolled in a single, multi-level science class.

The enrollment count for Canyon High School summer school is 0.

Registration was conducted Monday at Canyon Junior High School, with courses in mathematics, history, science algebra, biology and English offered if a minimum of 20 students expressed the desire for such courses.

The single science class offered is instructed by Bill Stocker, provides individualized teaching in live, earth, physical or biological science, depending on the remedial needs of each student. Classes began Tuesday.

According to CJHS principal Dave Corley, the low enrollment figure simply indicates that "not that many kids in Canyon need to go to summer school." However, he added that several students failed to register who may have needed to, and that others signed up for classes which were later dropped due to the failure to enroll in sufficient numbers.

The concentration of summer school students in the science class, he said, might indicate that more students failed that subject this year, or that many simply don't want to take it next fall and so signed up this summer "to get it over with."

Concern Voiced Here Over Buff Lake Geese

While most area residents seem concerned about the fate of Buffalo Lake from the standpoint of its use as a recreation area, Robert L. West believes it is highly important the lake be kept open as a refuge for a particular type of Canada Goose which has for years wintered at the lake.

West, who is in Canyon heading up a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department study of waterfowl, said this week that whatever happens to the lake it should be maintained as a refuge for the small Canada geese which nest in the eastern-central portions of the Arctic and winter in the Texas Panhandle.

"I am extremely in sympathy with the public desire for the use of the area for a recreational area," West said. "The state is sadly lacking in these areas as it is."

West noted that in the past the lake has been operated for both the use of the public and the use of the geese which flock there by the thousands in the winter.

The particular bird population West is concerned about is one which winters in basically three locations in the Panhandle area.

They winter in Buffalo Lake, in an area near Two Buttes, Colo. and an area in the southeastern portion of the Panhandle.

West said that the wintering grounds in the southeast portion of the Panhandle have been closed to the geese because the landowners in that area carried out a systematic program of harrassment.

Thus, the birds have begun wintering in Buffalo Lake and the Colorado area in increasing numbers.

West fears that if the environment at Buffalo Lake becomes such that the birds would be forced to leave, they might change their traditional wintering habits even further and fail to come as far into the U.S. as they have previously.

West noted that the population of Canada geese which winter at Buffalo Lake are almost unique in that the population has been consistently increasing during past years.

He said usually populations decrease and agencies involved in waterfowl protection must play a role of trying to catch up the population.

He would, he says, hate to see the geese population reduced.

While West said Buffalo Lake, if it were thrown open to full recreation, would provide recreation for relatively few persons, the absence or change in habits of the geese population could affect hunters throughout the mid-U.S. flyway.

He said he hopes any agency which takes over Buffalo Lake will be able to provide public recreation while concurrently providing a wintering habitat for the geese.

Safety Course Starts June 14

A tractor safety course for 14 and 15 year old youth from Randall and Potter counties is scheduled for June 14-16, 1973.

Satisfactory completion of the course will qualify the student for an exemption certificate to operate most farm tractors for hire. Department of Labor regulations now restrict these youth from operating farm tractors for hire because of the hazardous nature of farm power and equipment.

Two classroom sessions are scheduled. They will be held in Canyon at the Livestock Building from 2-5 p.m. on Thursday, June 14 and Friday, June 15. The students will demonstrate safe tractor driving at the Tri-State Fair grounds in Amarillo on June 16.

To receive an exemption certificate the youth must attend the two classroom sessions, pass a written examination on materials covered in the classroom, and demonstrate safe tractor handling ability.

Only one school is scheduled this year and no absences can be granted. There will be no cost for the course.

John Brazzil, County Extension Agent for Randall County, will serve as instructor for the safety course and will issue exemption certificates to those who satisfactorily complete the course.

Terminated Prof Wins Fellowship

Michael Green, assistant professor of history at West Texas State University has been awarded a $2,000 fellowship for post-doctoral work at the University of Oregon.

He is among eleven history scholars over the country participating in a seminar on the history and literature of the American West, being offered this summer at Oregon. Green left this week to attend the two-month session.

The fellowship was awarded by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

A graduate of Cornell College and the University of Iowa, Green was among the 14 faculty members at WTSU whose employment was terminated for the 1974-75 academic year due to the three-year decline in student enrollment.

He is scheduled to receive his Ph.D. this summer from Iowa. His dissertation topic was "The Federal-State Conflict in the Administration of Indian Policy: Georgia, Alabama and the Creeks, 1824-1834."

Green says he will draw upon both his dissertation and the Oregon seminar in presenting portions of "The American Dream," a new course offered by the WT history and English departments designed to explore American ideals and aspirations as revealed in literature and history. He will be team-teaching the course with Dr. Russell Sparling, assistant professor of English.

WANTED: Cowboy gear, preferably used, preferably old. Includes spurs, vests, hats, kerchiefs, shirts, and anything conceivable that may have been worn by the cowpunchers who rounded up doggies in the Panhandle circa 1880.

This was the call put forth from William Angus Moore, who with his wife, Margaret Echols Moore, directs the Paul Green musical drama "Texas," now in rehearsal in the West Texas State University Branding Iron Theatre.

Moore requested that anyone wishing to donate items of western-style clothing should contact him at the WTSU speech department, or through the "Texas" office at 2010 Fourth Avenue.

The musical saga of Panhandle history will open its seventh season June 21 in the Pioneer Amphitheatre at Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

Pictures Tell A Thousand Words For Retiring Canyon Photographer

By ANN MELIN

Canyon's growth since "the old days" of unpaved streets and livery stables comes into sharp focus when viewed through the discriminating lens of Pat Britain, studio photographer in Canyon since 1912.

Britain recently sold out his photography studio at 1400 Fifth Avenue to Jim Sands, formerly of The Canyon News. His retirement ends a 61-year career in Canyon which began when his father and mother opened up a studio over the old First National Bank in the early 1900's.

"Later on, my dad bought a railroad car and put it about where Haley's Printing Office is now, between two buildings. In 1915 we moved to where we are now and have been here ever since. My wife, Marie, has worked with me all along.

"I grew up in the studio, you could say," he recalls, "I was working even in grade school with the Kodaks."

In the old days, Britain says, his dad used flash powder instead of electronic flash.

"He'd put the powder in a tray about a foot long, get ready to make his exposure, hold it, then take a match and light the powder. It exploded and smoke went up all over the place."

A photographer's working hours were more precarious back then, he remembers, since one had to depend on natural lighting conditions. If a photographer spent too long on his subject, the lighting would fail and he'd have to try again when illumination was more favorable.

"With the Northern Skylight cameras, it might take two minutes to get your exposure. That's why they had those head rests for subjects. I switched to the electronic flash later primarily because of the babies. In that time they get to squirming and fidgeting if you couldn't shoot them right away."

Britain says that in a town the size of Canyon, a photographer is a "jack-of-all-trades." His own realm has included portraits, weddings, school pictures and in the past, frequent trips to the hospital to snap a newborn baby.

"In my files back there," he says, "I've got pictures of families here in Canyon going back three or four generations—their babies' and their babies' babies and their babies' babies. I guess we're the oldest establishment in town.

"Yes, I've seen a lot of growth. I remember when there weren't any buildings on the north side of the square, and when The Canyon News was a livery stable where folks going to Tulia or Plainview or somewhere stopped to feed hay to their horses.

"I'd say some things seem to be changing more or less for the worse than the better. Like all these gimmicks and giveaways in photography businesses. Offers of eight pictures for 88 cents, things like that. Hurts me to see customers fooled like that. Seeing those 'living color' portraits fade in two or three years."

He also laments the advent of big, impersonal chain stores coming into the town and threatening the existence of home-grown concerns.

"In a small town like this," he says, "You earn a reputation for promptness and honest dealing, instead of advertising on radio, television or telephone. We've had people come to the studio from Quitaque, Hereford, Happy, Wayside. Just recently a girl whose picture I'd taken when she was in school came all the way from Turkey with her baby for me to photograph.

"I'm no Rembrandt, but I take pride in my work. I don't give my customers any of this old junk. If they don't like the photograph, we re-do it.

"I'd say lighting is one of the main keys to good photography. Got to have the right lighting on the subject. And texture. You can't pick those things up in two or three weeks. It takes a lifetime."

"I like to photograph all ages—babies, young people, adults. I like 'em all. I just take the biggest fault against these elderly people not having their pictures taken after they get to be over 60. I guess I take fault against it because I've seen so much heartbreak among the people who don't have pictures of the old folks after they've died. People over sixty should have their pictures taken.

"I've made a lot of studio shots of myself, and my family usually sneaks up behind me on Christmas or Thanksgiving and gets a shot. One of these candid shots."

Sometimes Canyon's growth rate outgrew Britain's studio. Like when he had to quit handling West Texas State University student photos in 1945. ("There were just too many of 'em," he says). He continued with the public schools, but with this year's 520 young faces to photograph, he felt that job was busting the seams of his small concern.

He has been a longtime active member of the Panhandle High Plains Photographic Association, the Texas Photographic Association and the Southwest and National Photographic Associations. He points to a photograph on the wall of a young cowboy in a sheepskin coat who bears a definite resemblance to Paul Newman in his famous "Hud" role.

"That won second prize in the Southwestern Photographic Association convention," he recalls. "That boy came in, looking kinda' cowboyish like that. So I took the idea from that Marlboro commercial and shot him lighting up a cigarette."

But the real Britain was revealed powerfully to this Canyon News reporter when she completed her interview with Britain and requested he pose for a picture. He quickly had her camera in his hands, patting it on its back like an old friend. "Pretty good little camera here," he said, "But your lenses need cleaning. I'm going to clean your lens for you." He was up with the camera wiping its lenses, saying "Yea, I used to love to do commercial photography—I used to like to go out and shoot the Little League. All kinds of stuff—horses, dogs, people."

When requested to pose beside his big, black camera, he made a counter-proposal, "Why don't I just take your picture? What you mean a reporter's not supposed to be in the picture? Just why not? You just sit down right here and get your hair out of your eyes."

At that time, former Canyon News writer Jim Sands walked in and made the compromise. This reporter sat where the subject ordinarily sat. Britain stood behind his camera. Sands snapped the shot.

Finishing the session, Britain offered some helpful hints on shooting action shots.

Looking out his window over an intersection, he said, "If you want action shots, you get right up on 'em. Like this car passing by now. Take that shot quick and you've got a blur that indicates motion. But take that car just passing over yonder, at a distance, and you've frozen it. You've got infinity."

Pat Britain never met a face he didn't like—to photograph, that is. In business since 1912, Britain and his wife, Marie, are retiring from Canyon's oldest photography establishment. The studio, located at 1400 Fifth Avenue, is now under the ownership of former Canyon News reporter, Jim Sands.

Texas Breezes In With Windmill Show

With windmills again being considered as an energy source for the High Plains, it seems fitting that those giants of wind and power should be the focus for the gala opening of Paul Green's musical saga of Panhandle history, "Texas."

The production opens its seventh season June 21 featuring a windmill art competition, with awards for the best original representations, including paintings, drawings, photographs and three-dimensional metal sculpture.

First eliminations will be from photographs or slides of the works, with finalists to be announced on June 13.

Judges for the event will be Olive Vandruff Bugbee of Clarendon; Ben Carlton Mead of Dallas and the Panhandle and Billie Wolfe of Lubbock.

Mrs. Bugbee, curator of art at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, is well-known for her paintings of animals in their natural habitat. The daughter of a rancher-geologist, she has adjudicated numerous shows, including the National Miniature Show in Santa Fe. She resides in Clarendon, and has an historic windmill on her property.

She assisted the "Texas" musical drama last year in gathering paintings and sketches of her late husband, Harold Bugbee, noted Western artist, for the 1972 Souvenir Program.

Ben Carlton Mead has been painting the West and especially the Texas Panhandle for many years. He grew up in this area and has spent many years in intensive research concerning every detail of the early life on the Plains. One of his complete sets of one phase of the early life appeared in the "Texas" Souvenir Programs in 1970 and the drawings are now in the collection of the American National Bank of Amarillo.

During his years as a commercial artist and illustrator, Mead continued studies of western ways and is now working full time in depicting them.

Mead was recently an actor in a segment of "Gunsmoke" which will be released in September. The story involves the infamous Comancheros, the smugglers who exchanged ammunition and supplies for Mexican livestock and who operated in the Valley of Tears in the Panhandle. In connection with his appearance, he has been studying this phase of Panhandle history.

Miss Billie Wolfe of Lubbock is one of the outstanding authorities on windmills in the United States. She has been studying them intensively for ten years and is preparing a book and a film on their history and uses. She is a member of the Home Economics faculty of Texas Tech University.

Final awards for the competition will be made just before the performance of "Texas," and the Best-of-the-Show "Windmill" trophy will be given from the stage.

Tickets for the show and further information may be obtained from the "Texas" box office, 2010 Fourth Avenue.

The drive began last March and April, with further collections being taken in the past few weeks.

According to Women's PE department head Dr. Allene Stovall, the MS collection drive will become an annual project of the three clubs.

School's Out, Moms Keep Busy

By TROYCE MULHERIN

Weed-Fighting Greetings:

GUESS WHAT MOM? Only 76 days 'til the first day of school! Some moms are sleeping late. Some moms are making out work lists. Some moms are driving ball players around. Some moms are spending more at the grocery and enjoying it less. Some moms are counting the days. Then, too, some moms are enjoying these sun shiny days. The young ones have a way of growing up and older so fast, that it is most pleasant to have these long days in which to share working, playing and talking time with our youngsters. Take advantage.

SPEAKING OF GROWING older, Shelley Dozier did just that on the 31st, becoming fifteen years of age. Shelley, the daughter of Betty and John Dozier, was planning on a party, just a fun party for her friends. Party plans just happened to become finalized about birthday time. So, at least fifty of her friends came to the Dozier home for dancing on the patio, for to eat lots of goodies, and for to play pool, table hockey, etc., etc. Birthday party, or party party, everyone had a great time. We share special birthday wishes for this lovely young lady!

STARTING LAST TUESDAY, the action resumed at Gene Howe School. Summer school type action. Gay Cochran, our L.L.D. lady, is teaching two classes of L.L.D. and one class of reading. Our fearless leader, Mr. Lawless, will lead off with one class of lower elementary math and two classes of upper elementary math. All the classes are full, either fortunately, or unfortunately—depending on which side of the fence one is standing. These summer students, all volunteer types (volunteer in varying degrees, that is) will benefit greatly from an extra hour of learning. Betcha they have some fun, too.

SEVERAL PARENTS OF the Canyon High senior class have been busy, busy, busy. One project, the making of plaques for each senior student, needs some help from the graduating students before the label "finis" had been affixed thereto. Now, the parents have made a real nice plaque on which the class commencement announcement was decoupaged. They made one for each senior student, and same were given at the dinner party and at the all-night party. Those seniors who either did not attend these affairs, or attended and got so involved with whatever it is they got so involved with that they forgot to take their plaque home, do not despair! Sherrie Cates in Amarillo, 355-2028, 7922 Goodnight; and Ruby Abbott in Canyon, 655-3234, 2104 Second Avenue, each have some of these plaques, and would be pleased to have you graduates or your representatives, (otherwise known as girlfriend, boyfriend, mom or pop), pick yours up. These are real nice remembrances to have, so be sure and contact one of these ladies. Oh, yes, the school song is on the back of these plaques.

A VERY HAPPY, tho belated, birthday to Mary Whipple. This charming lady became a year charminger on June 1st. Many happies to you, Mary.

THE OUT-GOINGS, the incomings and the staying-theres got together for a nice salad luncheon on the 31st. The outs and the ins were actually members of the PTA executive committee, and they hosted the luncheon for the staying-theres (otherwise known as the faculty at Gene Howe). Heretofore, the committee has held a "thank you" tea for the teachers each year. This time around, we decided it would be nice to be able to sit down for a change. So, everyone made up one of their favorite type recipes, and shared same with those bearing the responsibilities of the "T" in PTA, our teachers. Actually the term "out-going" is a misnomer. Nobody, absolutely nobody, gets out of PTA. The nice part is that nobody wants to be out. In this case, the "out-going" means they moved over, but not out, so new officers could share their time and talents. Whatever. Anyway, these ladies sure can put some yummy food together. The support and help and participation of the faculty at Gene Howe have been invaluable and mucho appreciated!

MONTE BELL IS a year older! Has been since May 11th when he turned twelve. He held a swimming party for his friends last Saturday. Sorta an end-of-school and birthday type gathering all at once. Monte hosted the swim at the Y.W.C.A. in Amarillo for twenty-two party goers. Following the swim, the youngsters converged on Elwood Park for eats and drinks.

MEMBERS OF THE Board of Directors of the Northwest Texas Hospital Auxiliary received detailed information regarding the proposed health services center which the Amarillo Hospital District will be presenting to the voters for their consideration. The purpose of the center is to provide a system to deliver the best possible health care for Amarillo and area citizens at the lowest possible cost. Auxilians viewed slides depicting the various services offered by the district and studied the planned physical facility. The objectives of such proposed center were given and discussed. Very interesting. Am sure you will be receiving much more information regarding this before September.

AUXILIARY PRESIDENT, MRS. Raydell Palmer, presided during the regular business meeting following the presentation. Other Gene Howe area members present included Pauline Hefley, newsletter chairman, and Darlene Campbell, historian.

THE CANYON BOYS baseball teams are selling yummy chocolate candy to raise funds to support the league program. The candy cost a dollar a box and is verrry good, and the long green will help keep the various league teams going. Monte Bell, Terry Rudd, Steve Schmidt, Danny McGregor, Terry Miller, Keith Melton and Dan Whipple are a few of the players from the Gene Howe area selling. Twenty prizes will be given to the twenty top salesmen (one prize each, that is), so give one of these young men a ring-a-ling for a box of candy all your very own. Don't worry about the calories—you will use 'em all up keeping up with various summer activities. That's a fact, just a fact.

THE KIDS, INC., baseball program for Gene Howe is well under way. Larry Swink is coaching the first grade boys; Leonard Schmidt has taken the second grade boys; Buster Carlisle will be guiding the third and fourth grade boys to the playoffs. Glen Walker and Euris Phipps will be doing likewise with the fifth and sixth grade boys.

MR. AND MRS. Mac Thrash will be coaching the fifth and sixth grade girls. And, George Schmidt moved up a grade with his third grade girls from last year—all playing fourth grade ball this year. Elfa Turner is down for coaching honors with the third grade girls. These coaches and players have a blast. Sure a lot of good healthy fun. They will surely enjoy the support and cheering of parents and friends again this summer. Coaches—either call in your team's game results, or appoint a faithful co-worker or parent to do so. Everyone likes to know how everyone else is faring.

WEATHER REPORT FROM Colorado. Cold. Guy and Bob Mulherin spent a chilly few days camping out and fishing at Monument Lake weekend before last. They lugged the boat up, but the wind was as strong there as here at Meredith, so no boat. Fished North Lake, but the road to Bear and Blue Lakes was snowed in. Also icicles in streams during early morning hours. Fortunately, brother Bob caught fish for supper one night. The men moved on to Red River for a few days to warm up. (21 degrees is warm?). To each his own. And, the "his'es" can have it.

SURELY SOMEONE OUT there in Gene Howe land is doing something more interesting than pulling weeds and slinging paint around. Call in your vacation trip news, company news, or just call. Talking to adult-type people has its own rewards.

THANKS FOR THE use of the hall.

Troyce — 352-6053

Bible Has Western Touch In Palo Duro Services

When folks come down to Palo Duro Canyon each Sunday for the First Baptist Church-sponsored interdenominational mission, founder-director J.C. Newton tells them that his is the largest church in the world with "the sky for the ceiling and the four corners of the earth for walls."

Newton, who styles himself a "cowboy-layman preacher," camp up with the idea of weekly services in the canyon last year. The project was such a success that his church decided to make the mission an annual project.

Services are held at 11 a.m. each Sunday in the Cottonwood Grove at Water Crossing No. 1 in the canyon. Ministers and laymen from the various churches in the area are featured speakers, and visitors are invited to give testimony.

The informal canyon services go right along with Newton's philosophy of "going to the people wherever they are to give them the message of Jesus' love." To this end, Newton has traversed the Panhandle area like the itinerant ministers of old delivering the good news wherever people gather. He's preached whenever he could have the floor, and even when he didn't have the floor—like when he was sitting atop a horse.

"Oh, about twelve years ago, I don't exactly know where I got the idea—I started the practice in our riding clubs of having church on horseback, he says. "Here was a group of people that loved horses and loved the Lord, and weren't dressed up for church. So, they gathered around me on their horses and we had church right there."

For his saddleback sermons, Newton made a small lecturn that fits on the horn of his saddle on which he places his Bible. Mounted atop his horse, he's delivered sermons for riding clubs in White Deer, Amarillo, Dimmit and other area towns.

If his style is reminiscent of the Old West, his message is, too. J. Frank Dobie himself couldn't have improved on the Old Testament in Newton's thinking for depicting the cowboy's life.

"The Bible has a special western message. Oh, its full of cowboys and ranchers. They called 'em herdsmen in the Old Testament, but I call 'em cowboys 'cause that's what they were. Cowboys. I heard someone tell that cattle were mentioned something like 290 times in the Bible."

The lonely life of a cowboy whose blanket was a star-filled prairie sky was calculated to make the puncher a godly sort of man unlike the shoot-em-up variety depicted on television westerns, according to Newton. He points to cowboy night herding tunes that convey hopes of going to "that gold mine in the sky," "that last round-up" and "that sweet bye and bye."

One of Newton's favorite Biblical messages is the tale of Lazarus and the rich man—and he's given it, too, a decidedly western slant.

"The rich man had his golden spread right here on earth; Lazarus went to his golden spread in heaven. Lazarus was an old cowboy, you see, working the rich man's big ranch."

The Biblical tale of the Prodigal Son has a special personal meaning for Newton, who left his family the evening of Nov. 11, 1931 while mother, father and five brothers and sisters were working a peanut harvest near Portales.

The son of migrant workers during the Dust Bowl years, Newton points to the film adaptation of John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath" as the most true-to-life portrayal of the way his "Okie" family moved from place to place during the Depression years, settling down wherever there was a crop and a place to pitch a tent.

The film's iron-willed but noble-hearted matriarch, Ma Joad, reminds him of his own mother, he says.

"Oh, she went through the same thing, never having a home of her own, trying to raise us kids while travelling all over the place. That show just makes me cry every time I see it."

When he was 10 years old, his family's household was piled into a Model T Touring Car and moved to what the down-and-out Oklahoman dreamed of as the Land of Milk and Honey—California.

Although the promise of material riches was not fulfilled for the family, Newton says he received his first serious religious training there from a Baptist preacher who took the children of migrant laborers off the streets and told them of "greater riches in the next world."

After the family had returned to the Plains area and Newton had bid them farewell, he began "making a crop" on various farms and ranches in the Southwest. In 1932, the first year Newton spent on his own, he brought in his first annual income—"thirteen dollars and somethin' in addition to room and board."

It was in 1933, while working a farm near Muleshoe which belonged to the family of his future wife ("she was just a little girl then, though"), that Newton became a bona fide Christian.

"It was at a revival meeting at West Camp, south of Farwell. Us young folks used to like to sit at the back of the tent to cut up and all. Well, I was sitting back there, when this very small-like lady (who would later be my mother-in-law 'tho neither of us knew it then), came up to me and asked 'J.C., wouldn't you like to be saved, too?' I just followed her up there to the front and that was when I accepted Jesus Christ as my Savior."

He added that his wife, Fern, was saved the same night. "That was back in the Dust Bowl days, you'll remember," he says, "and they didn't have a baptistry. They cleaned out a stock tank and pumped the water in from the mill and we were baptised that way."

Newton says he's come a long way since those lean days. In addition to his ministerial duties, he is employed in the maintenance division of the Texas Highway Department, and owns "a little patch of grass" south of Canyon where he keeps a horse named Snip and raises calves for trading.

With only a sixth-grade education to his credit, Newton says he "depends on the Lord to give him the wisdom to speak."

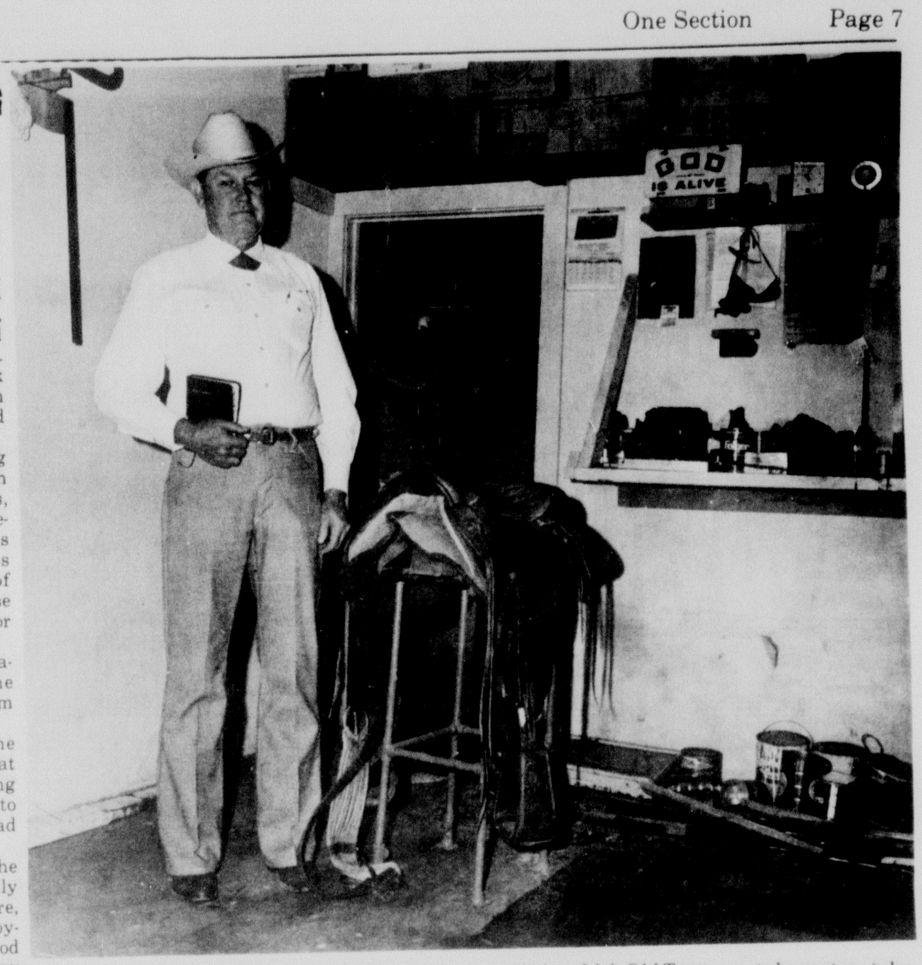
"Don't do much reading," he says, "just my Bible, and that seems to take care of everything for me. Teaches a person how to live and how to die. Best road map I know."

Newton says he feels the canyon services are especially enjoyable because "down there, all different faiths—Presbyterian, Baptist, Assembly of God or whatever, can give testimony together and love the Lord."

Musical programs are offered each week, with accompaniment on a small pipe organ and any other instruments folks choose to bring along. "And the birds get in on it, too, down there," Newton laughs.

Returning for this Sunday's services will be the youth choir of the Fairington Baptist Church of Houston, an ensemble under the direction of Ralph Anderson which performed at the mission last year. Sermon will be by Canyon barber Dewey Hunt. Businessman O.C. Chisolm is scheduled speaker for the Sunday, June 17 observances.

In addition to Newton, the Mission committee of the First Baptist Church also includes Chisolm, who is musical coordinator, Ann Brown, publicity director, and Weldon Trice and B.B. Kendrick, service coordinators.



Sermons from the saddle are J.C. Newton's specialty. The cowboy-layman preacher's sermonizing carries a special 'western' message in which Old Testament characters take on the attributes of Texas cowpunchers.

Cowbelles Promote 'Pounds For Pud'n' Beef

A "Pounds for Pud'n" program supplementing the "Beef For Father's Day" promotion already underway is being sponsored by the Golden Spread Cowbelle's Association, announced Mrs. Richard Cline, organization president.

The Cowbelle's will make a present to the father of the first child born in each of the Amarillo or Canyon hospitals on Father's Day amounting to a beef roast equal in weight to that of the new born infant, said Mrs. Cline.

Cowbelle members are attempting to establish the tradition of "Beef for Father's Day," similar to "candy for Halloween," turkey for Christmas," or "ham for Easter," in accordance with June 17th, the date proclaimed Father's Day by the 91st Congress and the President of the United States.

"The thought for the campaign is 'try a little tenderness with father — Make It Beef'," said Mrs. Cline.

Part of the national Cowbelle program, "Beef for Father's Day" will be locally supported by 30-second spot announcements for four days preceding Father's Day on NBC and CBS TV and radio networks. Full color ads will be published in the Good Housekeeping and Sunset magazines to support the campaign. Cowbelle members are asked to give special attention to these advertisements.

Each check that Cowbelle members write during this period will have a bright red sticker attached saying, "These are Beef Dollars that Pay This Bill."

Chairman of the "Beef for Father's Day" campaign is Evelyn Carpenter.

Golden Spread Cowbelle members are residents of Panhandle, Wildorado, Bushland, Canyon and Amarillo.

MVC Withdrawal Could Hurt WTSU

Memphis State University's recent withdrawal from the Missouri Valley Conference could cost West Texas State University's athletic program more than simply a conference opponent next fall, according to WTSU sports information director Tommy Bryant.

WTSU faces the same loss faced by all other schools in the conference, Bryant said, and that loss could be in the form of several thousand dollars in television revenue.

"If you're playing major football and have eight teams, which we had, you're guaranteed a certain number of games on television," Bryant said.

The sports information director said this fall would have marked the first year Missouri Valley teams would have been eligible to contract with television networks for coverage, coverage which generates a great deal of money for all teams in the conference.

Until this year, the MVC contained only seven teams considered to play a major football schedule. Drake university, until this time, was not considered to play a major schedule.

But, even with Drake now playing a major schedule, now that Memphis State has withdrawn from the MVC, the conference again faces a situation of having only seven teams playing major football schedules, Bryant said.

"When the NCAA and the TV networks get together and split up the televised games, if you don't have eight playing members, then it's catch as catch can on getting on TV," he said.

Bryant predicted the MVC will attempt to add another university which plays a major football schedule before Sept. 1.

"If they don't the Valley will very likely not have a TV game this year," he said, noting that television money is split between all schools in the conference.

The Buffaloes played a televised regional game with New Mexico State several years ago before WTSU entered the Missouri Valley. That year, the televised game put close to $90,000 in the WTSU athletic coffers.

Bryant said the problem the Valley faces is finding a major college to join the conference.

"There are not a great number of major college independents," he said.

Bryant said Memphis State, which won the conference all-sports trophy this spring, withdrew from the MVC primarily due to a disagreement on conference rules regarding the number of conference football games which each member school must play.

He said Memphis State wanted to play only four or five MVC games and then play five other schools which would be designated as conference games.

The conference bucked at this prospect since it is aiming toward a full round-robin schedule in football among the member university teams, he said.

Memphis State, which did not play in the top three in football last fall in the valley, reached the NCAA finals in basketball this winter and was beaten by UCLA.

WT Enrollment About Level

Enrollment for the first summer session at West Texas State University is just about on a par with enrollment for the initial session last summer, it was reported this week.

Dr. Donald Cates, registrar and dean of admissions, said more than 2700 persons had registered to attend the first session through 3 p.m. Tuesday.

A total of 2615 enrolled Monday during registration.

The figures compare favorably with enrollment for the first summer session in 1972 when over 2700 had registered through the second day.

Summer classes began at the university Tuesday.

Cates said he sees a good chance that the enrollment will exceed enrollment for the first summer term last year.

One factor which could prove to increase the enrollment is the fact that workshop enrollments have not yet been taken. They were counted in first day registration figures last year.

Fuel. . .

As far as nuclear energy is concerned, Watson said, there is at least seven years lead time and possibly as many as 11 years before plants can become operational.

One remedy in the near term, he said, is conservation.

"It makes no sense for Pioneer to be looking for three BTUs of gas to make 1 BTU of electricity," he said, noting that the gas company will continue to supply electric companies with the fuel.

Another remedy is relaxation of governmental regulations thus increasing exploration.

For the intermediate term, Watson said a recent report indicates that from a geological standpoint there are 1178 trillion cubic feet of gas remaining to be found. That total is more than has previously been discovered.

Nuclear energy also poses some intermediate range possibilities to ease the crisis.

Coal, he said, is always an available and abundant source of energy.

In the long term, Watson said the use of hydrogen is a good possibility as a fuel.

Watson emphasized that Pioneer was forced to curtail gas supply to only small numbers of persons last winter.

He said Pioneer will continue to be able to offer gas service to new industrial customers throughout its system.

In speaking of the cost of gas, Watson said that projections for gas costs for 1973, made two years ago, were surpassed in 1972, and he predicted this trend will continue in the foreseeable future.

Board. . .

citizens of Canyon and the remainder of Randall County be in providing 8 or 10 school buildings within the city limits of Amarillo?" he asked.

Jacobs, following Ashworth, said the board from Canyon is willing to listen to proposals but is not prepared to enter real negotiation until further study may be made.

"We must have a starting point," Dr. Jeff Moore, president of the Amarillo board said. "Certainly nearly anyone could see the logic of transferring the land west of Coulter Road into the Amarillo district. Could that be our starting road?"

Jacobs jokingly referred to Dr. Moore's assumption in implying that the move is not necessarily logical.

He said he would like to know the attitude of the parents whose children might be involved in the switch to schools.

He said, too, he is not sure that if the 11 sections remain in the Canyon district the city of Amarillo will not continue to grow in that direction.

Mrs. James Settle, who said she came to the meeting with several other parents from the Gene Howe area of the district, told the two boards she moved to the Gene Howe area primarily so her children could attend Canyon schools. She said if her children were required to move to Amarillo schools she might contemplate moving somewhere else.

With her statement, the audience broke into applause.

Dr. Jeff Moore said that no exchange of property could take place without a petition seeking such annexation from the residents of the area.

Lab. . .

have lots of things going for us."

The dean pledged the university "will pull all stops" to have the lab located on campus.

"It's more valuable to WT and A&M here than could be possible at any other location," he said.

Following Smallwood's presentation, the chamber board agreed to write a letter of support to be used as seen fit by the university in its quest for the site location.

In other action Monday night, the chamber board voted to sign a petition presented by Reeves Donnell to pledge support to any government representative who would work to keep Buffalo Lake open to the public.

Donnell presented the petition and cited the value of the lake to the area. The petition is being circulated in Canyon and Umbarger, and contains about 1000 signatures as of mid-week.

Board President Raymond Raillard reported that 25,000 brochures touting Canyon and its assets will be off the presses by next week.

He said the chamber also plans to issue a tabloid-size promotional piece which contains primarily pictures to be given tourists.

Open Golf Clinic Set For Saturday

An open golf clinic will be conducted by Dave Ragan, touring professional golfer from Brownsville, Tenn., at the Hunsley Hills Country Club, June 9, from 8-9 a.m.

The clinic is free to the public and all ages are invited to participate. No registration is necessary to attend.

Ragan is the weekend guest of the Paramount Baptist Church in Amarillo.

During seven years of professional golf tours, Ragan was on the U.S. Rider Cup Team in 1963, won the Waterlou Open, West Palm Beach Open and Haig International tournaments.

Art For Artists Proposed As New WT Degree Program

By ANN MELIN

If Dr. Emilio Caballero, chairman of the West Texas State University art department, is smiling a lot these days, it's because his department is in an exciting ferment that may change the entire direction of art training at the school. A proposed Bachelor of Fine Arts degree program with majors in studio and commercial art is now in the process of gaining approval at various committee levels at the university.

According to Dr. John Green, dean of the School of Fine Arts, the degree program is expected to go to the Texas Coordinating Board this summer, in time to be on the agenda for their October meeting which will consider new university degree programs.

"I am certainly hopeful that the Coordinating Board will think we have a very strong program here, and one that we should offer in the future," Green said.

Putting it succinctly, Dr. Caballero said that the new program would be designed for the person he says has long been neglected by the art department — the artist.

"The bulwark of our art program in the past," he said, "was the training of area public school teachers. This has been our greatest contribution, the thing for which we've become noted for..."

"But our 42-hour limited art degree program for the student who wants to become an artist is sadly deficient. We've been losing these students.

"When aspiring young artists come to us, we either have to admit to them that their training under our program could not compete with BFA students in other schools, and that other graduate schools might level their undergraduate work at WTSU causing them to lose hard-won hours taken at WTSU. Or we can suggest our teacher training program, an alternative that very few of these students accepted."

Because of a threatened overabundance of art education teachers Dr. Caballero said that his department has to change its orientation to professional artist training if it is to hope to compete with other schools and universities.

Under the new design, the department would cater to the interests of basically three kinds of students — those wishing to go into professional art, for which the BFA will be offered; those wishing to go into teaching, for which the BS will be offered, and students wishing a general liberal arts education with concentration in art, for which the BA degree will be geared.

The new BFA degree would double the course requirement to 81 semester hours in art needed for completion of work. The new degree would also require 36 semester hours of general courses required by the University, and seven semester hours of free electives.

With the current budget squeeze at the University, the art department devised the proposed baccalaureate program so that, despite the doubling of required courses, as well as the introduction of several new specialized courses, the art department will require no new faculty, no additional facilities, and only minimal expenditures in equipment.

To achieve this awesome task with their present seven-member faculty and an average art department enrollment of almost 600 students, the department last spring began implementation of a "multiple class listing" system proposed by art instructor Darold Dean Smith.

The system was used last spring by the department in an experimental project to determine feasibility. Under it, up to four different classes ranging from freshman to graduate level were offered at one time, in one room and under the instruction of one teacher. The system allows each instructor to teach six courses per semester instead of the traditional three-course load, Caballero said.

While the classes increase considerably in size under the new program, the training, if anything, is more individualized, Caballero said.

As envisioned and as worked out in practice in the spring pilot program, Caballero said, the multi-levelled classes operate like a "big studio guild" whereby the teacher becomes the master instructor, the graduate students the journeymen, and the underclassmen the apprentices.

"This program allows the younger student to draw upon the experience and knowledge of older students, and the older student is able to get the same teaching experience offered in the graduate assistantships which only go to a few exceptional students," Caballero said.

According to him, the program provides each student with a maximum involvement in the art process in a natural situation, and is a "humanistic approach to learning in which personal involvement is at its peak."

The program also allows students to enroll in a course "when they want and need it," he said. Multiple listing of art classes also simplifies scheduling by offering almost every course each semester. Under the old plan, many courses were only offered every other semester and some only once every two years. "This has caused much hardship on our students and a waste of precious time and money," Caballero said.

Questionnaires submitted to students participating in the spring pilot program indicated that the majority of students were overwhelmingly in favor of the change.

Coincident with the ferment now going on in the art department was the action taken by the Texas Coordinating Board as recommended by the Texas Association of Schools of Art to implement in all Texas universities and colleges an art "core-curriculum" for freshman and sophomore art students. Under the new system, to go into effect within the next two years, freshman art majors will be required to take 18 hours of art classes, and sophomores will have to take a total of 12 art hours. Previously, art students at WTSU took the general university curricula during the first two years with art courses leading to a baccalaureate degree being taken randomly, Caballero said.

Under the core curriculum program, freshman-sophomore art classes will be uniform, with only slight variations, in every Texas university and college. In the past, course offerings varied to the extent that transferrals of art courses from school to school were totally determined by the individual art departments.

"Students under the new plan will no longer have to fear that their course work in art won't be accepted by another university," Caballero said. He added that the fear of non-acceptance of WTSU course work kept away many students in the area who wanted to attend WTSU and transfer later to another college. "They needn't worry about that any longer," he said.

The core curriculum program provides an excellent groundwork for the proposed BFA degree program, he added.

Researching the need for such a degree program, the WT art department found that nine of the 22 state institutions of higher learning in Texas offered the BFA degree. Only five of these 22 state institutions with an enrollment above 5,000 did not offer such a program. Two of the five were polytechnic schools, and two had a B.A. program that closely approximated the requirements of the B.F.A.

Said Dr. Caballero, "This leaves WT the only state university with an enrollment over 5,000 that does not offer a substantial art degree program to its students which would adequately prepare them for this increasingly competitive field."

Caballero said that confidence in the new program to attract new students to the university is "universal among the art faculty." He added that the program "goes right along with our new president's philosophy to 'recapture the conception that we exist to serve our area, our state and our people.'

"As I see it, the proposed B.F.A. would offer to area and state students, and to people in general, the opportunity to get the same experience to be an artist that they would be able to get in the best universities in the country. Our proposed program is for people!"

ject. The local district will fund the remainder.

Jacobs said only a small number of parking spaces will be lost with construction of the new buildings.

Board member Dr. Dudley Moore asked if it would not be feasible to obtain a bid on construction from a manufacturer of metal buildings.

Jacobs and Board President Tom Keeling said they doubt the cost on a metal building would be much below the cost of the masonry structure now planned.

Jacobs told board members they will be very close on their budgeting for the project.

In other business, the board discussed briefly the maintenance and janitorial operation of the school system.

The vocational buildings are to be completed by Aug. 1, 1974, Jacobs told the board and bids must be let by Aug. 29, 1973.

Mrs. Lolmaugh told jurors upon entering the car to leave, she noticed a revolver in the glove compartment.

"I asked what he was doing with the gun and his reply was to laugh and change the subject," she said, noting that she related to him she had heard he was carrying the gun for her husband.

"From Betty's Cafe we went in the country and parked," she said.

"And, you had intercourse, didn't you?" Hampton asked.

"Yes sir, we had intercourse," she replied.

After staying in the country for a period of time, she said she asked her father to return to the cafe so she could go home.

Mrs. Lolmaugh testified that upon entering the parking lot at Betty's Cafe she noticed her husband's motorcycle. She said she told her father to drive on and she would talk to Marvin.

"He said 'no, I'll handle this,'" she testified.

When the car stopped, she said, her husband was beside the door and Mullin "hit at it (a gun)."

She said she heard two shots fired.

During Mrs. Lolmaugh's testimony, the state was able to have introduced before the jury her testimony that her husband had once before shot a man who she was seeing.

She told prosecutor McClendon her husband had shot the man in the nose with a .22 caliber pistol.

No charges were filed in that case.

She also testified during cross examination that she had "just naturally lied" when she told investigating officers on the night following the shooting that she had not been having sexual relations with her father.

McClendon pressed her on whether she had also told her husband while he was still in jail the following day that she would get him off this time. She admitted making the statement.

Lolmaugh took the stand in his own defense late in the afternoon Tuesday and testified that before he and Mrs. Lolmaugh were married she confessed to him she had had sexual relations with her father.

His testimony indicated that his attitude at that time was that he expected her not to have any more such relations.

He testified that on the night of the shooting, he had waited for his wife and when she did not return from the movie, he went looking for her.

First, he went to the Circus Room where he met Mrs. Hart and they discussed the prospect that they might catch Mrs. Lolmaugh and Mullin together.

Mrs. Lolmaugh, however, left the Circus Room and drove in a direction toward their home and Lolmaugh testified that he returned home by another route to meet her there.

He returned home and waited and still she did not return, he said, and he took his pistol and went to find her.

He told jurors that based on a statement made to him by Mrs. Hart, he believed Mullin was carrying a gun for him.

He found his wife's car at Betty's Cafe and got into her car to wait.

He said when the two arrived at the cafe parking lot, he walked up to the car and Mullin hit his hand causing the weapon to discharge.

He said Mullin appeared to be coming at him again and he fired a second time.

The state's witnesses were primarily police officers who conducted the investigation.

The doctor who performed the autopsy on Mullin also testified.

New 'Friends' Directors Named

New directors of the Friends of Fine Arts at West Texas State University were elected recently.

They are Mrs. Allen Cansler of Hereford, Mrs. H. R. Fulton, Jr. of Canyon, Mrs. Robert A. Johnson of Pampa, Mrs. C. D. Wofford of Plainview and Ray C. Johnson Jr., S. Wayne O'Keefe and Dr. Hal G. Riddle, all of Amarillo.

The new directors will take office Sept. 1.

The Friends of Fine Arts was founded four years ago by Texas Panhandle persons interested in supporting and funding activities of the WTSU School of Fine Arts for which state fund cannot be used.

Among projects supported by the organization for the coming year are efforts to secure grants from foundations and private sources for a new Fine Arts Complex on campus and acquisition of an artist-in-residence for 1973-74.

Fed Grant Awarded WTSU For Students

West Texas State University has been awarded $156,303 by the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare for its college work-study program for the next fiscal year beginning July 1.

The federal funds will provide 80 per cent of student payrolls and WTSU or an off-campus agency will provide the remaining percentage.

The money granted WTSU will provide for about 330 students.

New Mobile Homes May Surprise You

By BECKY HALL
County Extension Agent
(Home Economics)

Mobile homes may surprise those shopping for a place to live. Mobile home manufacturers have done a tremendous job of making mobile home interiors roomy in appearance, attractive and livable.

Because of shape and space limits, shoppers should study several areas with their own family needs in mind.

In the dining area check seating capacity. Pull chairs back from the table and sit down. Check possibilities of serving the table with all chairs in use.

Notice confining raised levels or railings. Space should be flexible enough to allow moving out into kitchen or living areas when a need arises.

Bedrooms are another area to consider. A tape measure come in handy here. Families may want to use standard-size beds if space is available for them.

Measuring built-in dressers and drawers can determine whether they are deep enough to serve well.

Lighting also merits a good check. It should be ample and flexible in the living room, kitchen, bedrooms and bathroom.

Studying a home with the family in mind is a must. Factors to consider include activities the family will perform in the home, furniture needs, etc., space for adding more pieces if necessary, a place for such items as the television set or the sewing machine, and enough storage space.

Interior furnishings help make the unit livable. Mobile home shoppers need to exercise all the care they would in building or renting a home or apartment.

Insulation Saves Fuel — Homeowners can join in the fight to conserve fuel supplies by assuring the proper insulation is used in their homes. Sufficient insulation can cut the amount of fuel required for both heating and cooling. The energy crisis may well become each homeowners concern.

Leaguers Vie In Candy Sales

Little Leaguers in Canyon are busy this week vying for places among the top ten scorers in candy sales who will each receive a new baseball glove for their efforts.

Weyman Brown, president of the Little League, dropped into the Canyon News office to release the names of the top six players who as of news time seemed to be stealing ahead of their teammates in sales, and five others who are bogged down in a tie for the next four places.

Heading the order are Scott Robinson of the Rangers; Michael Tucek of the Orioles, Todd Peppard of the Twins, James Pauley of the Giants, Gary Chumbley and Mike Hayes, both of the Twins.

Coming in behind to score for the next four places are tied-players Gary Lee Pine of the Orioles, Kirk Moore of the Rangers, Johnny Brooks and Steve Schmidt of the Braves and Robert Johnston of the Astros.

"I'm not going to say how many boxes these boys sold since it might discourage the others," says Brown. He emphasized the fact that the results aren't final, and that any of the Leaguers might slide ahead of his teammates before noon Saturday, when the gloves will be presented to the top salesmen.

Money from the candy sales will go toward new uniforms and equipment for the teams.

New Protest Heard Here On County Road Maintenance

On the heels of a month-long protest by several women in the northwest portion of Randall County, county commissioners received Monday another protest from a group of northeast county residents about road maintenance.

William H. Parks of Mescalero Park addition presented commissioners with a petition signed by 63 persons. The petition requests immediate action be taken to repair and provide better future maintenance on 101 Trail in Mescalero Park.

"We believe we are entitled to better road maintenance," the petition states.

Commissioners assured Parks a project to refurbish 101 Trail is on the schedule for this summer. They decided informally, however, to move up the project on the summer maintenance timetable.

Road Superintendent Joe West agreed to begin work on repairing the road by mid-July.

Parks complained that he had talked several times with Commissioner Paul Lindsey and had been told each time that the road would be repaired.

"101 Trail is, in my opinion, beyond repair," Parks said. "You couldn't ride a bike down that road without flipping it."

Parks said the road has been impassable this year and was in bad shape last year, but received no maintenance.

"Why is that road consistently neglected when it's in worse shape than other roads are in?" he asked. "Since there's been no maintenance on it, weather and time have not improved it."

"It's bad and I agree with you," Lindsey said. "It's definitely in the program and we are going to fix it."

Lindsey said the county plans to patch and seal coat the road.

He noted that since 101 Trail is not heavily traveled, it is much more likely than a heavy traveled road to need repairs.

Parks presentation of the petition Monday followed by just two weeks a final visit to the commissioners by Mrs. Fern Patterson and a group of women who live on Hill Road in the northwest portion of the county. They complained their road needs paving. Commissioners declined to pave the road.

In other business Monday, Sheriff Cliff Longest presented a plan to commissioners for the sharing of bailiffs for 181st and 47th District Courts which meet in Potter and Randall counties.

Longest said when the courts are in session in Canyon, he is required to provide a deputy to act as bailiff for the courts. In many instances, he said, both courts are having sessions on one day and this means both deputies available for outside work in his office must spend their time in the courtroom.

The sheriff suggested the county pay a pro-rata share of the bailiffs hired by the two courts to work in Amarillo. Then, he said, the bailiffs could come to Canyon and the deputies would be freed from bailiff duty.

Cost would be about $450 each for the county's share, he noted.

Commissioners questioned the advisability of that plan or an alternate plan of simply hiring an additional deputy for the sheriff's office, a deputy who could act as relief dispatcher and as bailiff.

They tabled action on the request until a later date.

The commissioners learned they have received a $991 dividend check for their last policy period from the county insurance company.

Agent George Blackwell said under a new insurance contract for the next three years, the county will pay $14,752 for fire insurance.

Commissioners tabled a request by city commissioners to give financial assistance to the summer recreation program sponsored by the city.

They okayed the advertising for bids for several pieces of equipment in the county tax assessor's office and the sheriff's office.

Camping Without Conforming Can Be Fun

By JIM SANDS

To the average family camper, living in the out of doors without benefit of organized campsites is neither practical nor possible in this day and age of comfort and ease. Nothing could be further from the truth and every camping family could, or maybe should, discover this entirely different approach to the enjoyment of nature at its best. . .unspoiled and not cluttered by hordes of people and the many 'like being at home' distractions.

With the leaps and bounds growth of all forms of camping, much emphasis has been placed on ultra-modern campgrounds by state, federal and local agencies. On the surface this appears to be a great step forward but with this emphasis has also come a trend toward over-modernization, crowding and, at times, even over-controlled activity. It is because of these facts that a majority of our touring families have done much camping without once reaping the greatest rewards of outdoor living. The peace, the quiet, the chance to set a casual pace.

The new campgrounds now popping up around the country are not only being designed with smaller units, but many are coming to resemble motels—with each tenant simply required to bring his own room. Showers, paved drives, playgrounds, electric outlets and tiled restrooms not only make camping more expensive through higher fees, but these are the self same things commonly found at home. Home, remember, is that boring place which the camper is trying to forget. I have, on several occasions, pitched my canvas castle amid such surroundings and each time experienced the feeling that I was somehow bedded down in Central Park. After a day or two of the mobile rat-race I would head for the open forests and tranquility, far from the tent-peg to tent-peg set.

'Dry Camping,' as I call it, does require a measure of extra effort, more careful planning and the acceptance of added obligations. The rewards are great and for those who would not relish such fare as a steady diet, to taste it once would be quite an experience. With proper planning and a smattering of extra equipment, a visit to the unimproved areas will be remembered long after the glowing coals of other campfires have died away.

While improvements in equipment have made camping next to carefree under any conditions, there are a few pitfalls. The following are a few rules, tips and notes of caution for anyone who really wants to get away from the rush of a modern world and the day to day routine of home.

WHERE TO GO: With millions of acres of forested land, good access roads and a common sense approach to public use, the national forests are most often a good bet for back-country camping. Unless extreme fire conditions exist at the time, most national forest land is open to use by campers. Those forests in Southern California would be an exception but in the Rocky Mountains sportsman-like practices seldom bring camper and forest ranger to arms.

Maps of the various national forest regions are available at forest offices and ranger stations in each particular district and information on all regions may be secured by writing to The National Forest Service, Dept. of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. Campground guides and major oil company maps usually show the location and boundaries of forest areas and often give some idea of access roads, lakes and streams. In many instances, I have selected a forest road on which an improved campground was located, driven a few miles beyond the camp and discovered a secluded spot alongside a lake or fish-filled stream. By all means, get away from paved highways. . .and the further the better.

In Colorado, I have found the mountains, trees, animals and waterways most receptive to my many intrusions. I have, in return for their hospitality, tried to show my appreciation by leaving their front yards clean and orderly and with no visible signs or marks to mar the natural beauty.

One of my favorite areas for 'non-conforming' would have to be the Gunnison Country on Colorado's Western Slope. With a deep interest in mountain scenery, stream or lake fishing and Western History I have yet to come away disappointed. In addition to the many organized, but rustic, campgrounds in the area, my summer outings have been most often spent amid the peace and quiet of a shaded nook alongside the cascading Taylor River or near the smaller, swift flowing Spring Creek. From these vantage points one is well located to make side trips for casting a line into the storied Gunnison River or to try his luck with the still, but crystal-clear waters of Taylor Reservoir.

If the mood should strike, I also have the option of scouting the countryside for old and deserted 'Ghost Towns' or mining camps. Tin Cup, while the most famous such camp in the county, is by no means the only one. My only limitation to date has been time, energy and luck.

If I decide to be 'just lazy' and look, the scenery has always been more than enough to fill the bill.

Some of my other favorites would be the entire length of the Poudre River and, in the same vicinity, that wooded region lying south of Red Feather Lakes along the road from Rustic.

The Lake City area, the forest lands along the San Juan River's West Fork, the Silverton-Ouray country and Grand Mesa near Grand Junction are equally well suited for avoiding crowded campgrounds, regardless of moods or motives. And all offer the fantastic fishing and scenery which always improves as the number of people diminishes.

The same is true in Wyoming where I have pitched my old 9 x 12 on many occasions without benefit of tables, water pumps, fireplaces or 'two seater johns.'

The Big Horn Mountains between Sheridan and Shell, the Wind River-Brooks Lake region near Dubois, the Green River's Flaming Gorge and the Cody Road to Yellowstone. All have their points of greatness and easily merit attention from the vagabond camper.

Utah is certainly no piker in regard to open public domain and her version of the Flaming Gorge north of Vernal could very well be 'The Number One' spot for a crack at this fascinating game of getting away from it all.

Logan Canyon in the north-central part of the state and the Uinta Range to the northeast will prove just as inviting and rewarding for just as many reasons. And would you believe that it is possible to hop from a semi-remote campsite to downtown Salt Lake City in twenty minutes.

Most of my sorties into the boundaries of New Mexico have been in search of history and while there I often trade mountain scenery and history for beautiful, multi-colored rock formations and peeks into the past. The countryside around Taos, Santa Fe, Las Vegas, Albuquerque, Grants and Silver City have given me untold hours and days of opportunity to learn of a long-ago civilization that often defies the imagination of modern man. And I can honestly say that roughing it has been, in many instances, the most practical means of attaining these ends.

I also admit that New Mexico does have a wealth of mountain recreation and you could surely fool a fish or bang a buck but I never waste Down South time with such ordinary frills. I go primarily to look and learn in one of the largest open-air, drive-in, museums in the world. And to coin a phrase, it is enchanting.

THE 'OFF ROAD' RULES: Regulations concerning the use of forest lands do vary from region to region, or state to state, but good common sense will normally suffice. The cutting of living trees, littering and being a potential fire-brand are three universal taboos. . .in any forest. . .under any conditions. If you ever need to find a forest ranger fast, just pick up an ax and start chopping.

Latrines should be located well away from lakes or streams and all but burnable refuse should be hauled out and dumped in proper containers when leaving. Even when buried, cans require years in decaying and bottles will last forever. Too, discarded bottles have been known to start fires by magnifying or reflecting rays from the sun.

Fire prevention is an important aspect of any type camping but when building an open campfire in remote areas, extreme care must be taken. Always clear a circle, at least twelve feet in diameter, of all combustible material. If rocks are available, make a retaining circle or windbreak and remember to keep all fires small. If winds are strong it is much safer to limit fires to the campstove.

Some forest regions, such as in Montana and Oregon, require that all forest users (each party, car or pack train) have an ax, bucket and shovel. In addition to their value as fire fighting tools, all are always useful even when camping in regions not requiring them. Other regions, like California, issue fire permits but this is actually a form of registration and poses no problem. It is yours for the asking at any ranger station in the state. In any event, the meeting of physical requirements does not legalize unsafe or sloppy campfire practices.

SOME PRECAUTIONS: Since water faucets are seldom found in other than improved camps, an ample supply of drinking water should be taken along. Stream or lake water often appears pure and clean but any used for human consumption should first be boiled for five minutes or treated with two Halazone tablets or two drops of ordinary iodine per quart. To conserve the drinking supply however, water for bathing, laundering and dishwashing may be used from most water sources without treatment. Melted snow, when available, is another good supplier of drinking water.

A first aid kit and snake bite kit will seldom be needed but both are very important for complete peace of mind. If going into extremely remote country it is advisable to inform someone—friends, forest rangers or other authorities—of where you are going and when you expect to return. After taking this precaution, do not fail to check back in with THE SAME AUTHORITIES, thereby preventing unnecessary concern and quite possibly a costly and time consuming search.

EXTRA EQUIPMENT: Actually, backcountry camping may be accomplished with even less gear than is usually deemed necessary for normal campground living. However, for the sake of having the basic conveniences which even the old-timers have come to expect, the following items should not detract too much from the atmosphere and serenity.

Not wanting to chance finding a large stump or flat-topped rock nearby, a folding camp or card table will do the job when tenting. Folding chairs or camp stools are even more optional but handy none the less. Even a portable toilet, especially when children are along, will prove to be worth the money and effort. These items, along with the aforementioned fire fighting tools, first aid kit, water purifiers and extra bags for hauling out cans and bottles would go a long way toward making even a tenderfoot's first 'dry camp' attempt a whopping success. From that first time on, the individual will find himself adding to or deleting from camp gear as conditions require.

FOOD AND OTHER SUPPLIES: Assuming that stores will be some distance away from the selected site, care should be taken in compiling food and equipment lists. If planning an extended outing, consideration could be given to dried foods, canned goods and meats which do not spoil easily. I find that bacon, eggs and oleo will keep for days, in the mountains, without refrigeration. For doubtful items, a cool stream or shaded hole in the ground makes an ideal remote 'icebox.'

Camping, or 'roughing it,' in this manner is not nearly so demanding as one might think and there is something about a self-made campsite that is difficult to explain. A secluded nook, towering trees, a mountain stream ready and waiting for the fellow in search of fish or game or just a touch of old fashioned loafing. It gives me a certain feeling to know that I may be the first, last and only human being to have lived for awhile on one certain part of this big and crowded earth.
